Central Okanagan continues to see steady economic growth from a number of different sectors. The growth has been positive for the District of West Kelowna and the City of Kelowna as the municipalities diversify their economies in agriculture, manufacturing, tourism, retail and construction, but coupled with the heavy increase in population, the Okanagan Valley is also witnessing a surge of traffic demands.

In addition, the Westbank Lands has reached in excess of $1.3 billion in assessed property value, presenting a tremendous amount of existing and anticipating development that will require ongoing planning and coordination services.

Join us in Kelowna and learn about the current status of capital projects, emerging trends and how these opportunities translate for consulting engineering with guest speakers:

- Murray Tekano, Okanagan Shuswap District Director, Ministry of Transportation and Infrastructure
- Alan Newcombe, Divisional Director - Infrastructure, City of Kelowna
- Alan Fillion, GM of Engineering & PW, District of West Kelowna
- Dan Brown, Director of Development, Westbank First Nations
